

ABSTRACT

A near field probe for testing installed components of an electromagnetic radiating system on a missile. The probe design comprises a diode antenna with a balun. The probe utilizes a dual diode arrangement which provides approximately 5 twice the output voltage as the previous probe. The probe may then be placed further away from the radiating system under test.